SHEMA

HILL'D by rude gales, while yet reluctant May Withholds the beauties of the vernal day; As fome fond maid, whom matron frowns reprove, Suspends the smile her heart devotes to love; The feafon's pleafures too delay their hour, And winter revels with protracted power: Then blame not, Critics, if, thus late, we bring A Winter Drama—but reproach—the fpring. What prudent Cit dares yet the feafon truft, Bask in his whisky, and enjoy the dust? Hors'd in Cheapfide, scarce yet the gayer spark Achieves the Sunday triumph of the Park; Scarce yet you fee him, dreading to be late, Scour the New Road, and dash thro' Grosvenor-gate: Anxious—yet timorous too!—his steed to show, The hack Bucephalus of Rotten-row. Careless he seems, yet, vigilantly fly, Woos the stray glance of Ladies passing by, While his off heel, infidiously aside, Provokes the caper which he feems to chide. Scarce rural Kenfington due honour gains; The vulgar verdure of her walk remains! Where white-rob'd misses amble two by two, Nodding to booted beaux-" How'do, how'do?" With gen'rous questions that no answer wait, " How vastly full! A'n't you come vastly late? "I'n't it quite charming? When do you leave town? " A'n't you quite tir'd? Pray can we fet you down?" These suburb pleasures of a London May, Imperfect yet, we hail the cold delay; Should our Play pleafe—and you're indulgent ever— Be your decree—" 'Tis better late than never."

SCENE I.

A magnificent Pavilion near PIZARRO'S Tent—a View of the Spanish Camp in the back Ground.— ELVIRA is discovered sleeping under a canopy on one side of the Pavilion—VALVERDE enters, gazes on ELVIRA, kneels, and attempts to kish her hand; ELVIRA, awakened, rifes and looks at him with indignation.

Elv. A UDACIOUS! Whence is thy privilege to interrupt the few moments of repole my haraffed mind can fnatch amid the tumults of this noisy camp? Shall I inform your master of this presumptuous treachery? shall I disclose thee to Pizarro? Hey!

Vul. I am his servant, it is true—trusted by him—and I know him well; and therefore its I ask, by what magic could Pizarro gain your heart, by what fatality still holds he your affection ?

Elv. Hold! thou trufty SECRETARY!

Val. Ignobly born! in mind and manners rude, ferocious, and unpolished, though cool and crasty if occasion need—in youth audacious—ill his first manhood—a licensed pirate—treating men as brutes, the world as booty; yet now the Spanish hero is he styled—the first of Spanish conquerors! and for a warrior so accomplished, it is fit Elvira should leave her noble family, her same, her home, to share the dangers, humours, and the crimes of such a lover as Pizarro!

Elv. What! Valverde moralizing! But grant I am in error, what is my incentive? Passion, infatuation, call it as you will; but what attaches thee to this despised, unworthy leader?—Base lucre is thy object, mean fraud thy means. Could you gain me, you only hope to win a higher interest in Pizarro-I know you.

Val. On my foul, you wrong me; what else my faults, I have none towards you: but indulge the scorn and levity of your nature; do it while yet the time permits; the gloomy hour, I fear, too soon approaches.

Elv. Valverde, a prophet too!

Val. Hear me, Elvira—Shame from his late defeat, and burning wishes for revenge, again have brought Pizarro to Peru; but trust me, he over-rates his strength, nor measures well the foe. Encamped in a strange country, where terror cannot force, nor corruption buy a single friend, what have we to hope? The army murmuring at increasing hardships, while Pizarro decorates with gaudy spoil the gay pavilion of his luxury! each day diminishes our force.

Elv. But are you not the heirs of those that fall?

Val. Are gain and plunder then our only purpose? Is this Elvira's heroism?

Elv. No, so save me Heaven! I abhor the motive, means, and end of your pursuits; but I will trust none of you:—in your whole army there is not one of you that has a heart, or speaks ingenuously—aged Las-Casas, and he alone, excepted.

Val. He! an enthusiast in the opposite and worse extreme!

Elv. Oh! had I earlier known that virtuous man, how different might my lot have been!

Val. I will grant, Pizarro could not then so easily have duped you; forgive me, but at that event I ftill must wonder. 10 Day 1118

Elv. Hear me, Valverde.—When first my virgin fancy waked to love, Pizarro was my country's idol. Self-taught, self-raised, and felfsupported, he became a hero; and I was formed to be won by glory and renown. 'Tis known that when he left Panama in a flight veffel, his force was not an hundred men. Arrived in the island of Gallo, with his sword he drew a line upon the fands, and faid, " Pass those who fear to die or conquer with their leader." Thirteen alone remained, and at the head of these the warrior stood his ground. Even at the moment when my ears first caught this tale, my heart exclaimed, "Pizarro is its lord!" What fince I have perceived, or thought, or felt! you must have more worth to win the knowledge of.

Val. I press no further; still assured that while Alonzo de Molina, our General's former friend and pupil, leads the enemy, Pizarro never more will be a conqueror. (Trumpets without.)

Elv. Silence! I hear him coming; look not perplexed.

Piz. But first with weariless remonstrance he sued to win me from my purpose, and untwine the sword from my determined grasp. Much he spoke of right, of justice and humanity, calling the Peruvians our innocent and unoffending brethren.

Las-C. Pizarro, we attend your fummons.

Piz. Welcome, venerable father—my friends, most welcome. Friends and fellow-soldiers, at length the hour is arrived, which to Pizarro's hopes presents the full reward of our undaunted enterprise and long-enduring toils. Consident in security, this day the soe devotes to solemn facrifice: if with bold surprise we strike on their solemnity—trust to your leader's word—we shall not fail.

Oro. I will answer that; for I love to hear and to repeat the hero's name. Rolla, the kinsman of the King, is the idol of our army; in war a tiger, chased by the hunter's spear; in peace as gentle as the unweaned lamb. Cora was once betrothed to him; but finding she preserved Alonzo, he resigned his claim, and, I fear, his peace, to friendship and to Cora's happiness; yet still he loves her with a pure and holy fire.

A Bank surrounded by a wild Wood, and Rocks.— CORA, sitting on the roat of a tree, is playing with her Child.—ALONZO looks over them with delight and chearfulness.

Cora. NOW confess, does he resemble thee, or

Al. Indeed he is liker thee—thy rofy foftness,

Cora. But his auburn hair, the colour of his eyes, Alonzo.—O! my lord's image, and my heart's adored! (Pressing the Child to her bosom.)

Al. The little daring urchin robs me, I doubt, of some portion of thy love, my Cora. At least he shares caresses, which till his birth were only mine.

Cora. Oh no, Alonzo! a mother's love for her dear babe is not a stealth, or taken from the father's store; it is a new delight that turns with quicken'd gratitude to HIM, the author of her augmented bliss.

Al. Could Cora think me serious?

Cora. I am fure he will speak soon: then will be the last of the three holydays allowed by Nature's fanction to the fond anxious mother's heart.

Al. What are those three?

Cora. The ecstacy of his birth I pass; that in part is selfish: but when first the white blossoms of his teeth appear, breaking the crimson buds that did incase them; that is a day of joy: next, when from his father's arms he runs without support, and clings, laughing and delighted, to his mother's knee; that is the mother's heart's next holyday: and sweeter still the third, whene'er his little stammering tongue shall utter the grateful found of, Father, Mother!—O! that is the dearest joy of all!

Al. Beloved Cora!

Cora. Oh! my Alonzo! daily, hourly, do I pour thanks to Heaven for the dear bleffing I possess in him and thee.

Al. To Heaven and Rolla.

Cora. Yes, to Heaven and Rolla: and art thou not grateful to them too, Alonzo? art thou not happy?

Al. Can Cora ask that question?

Cora. Why then of late fo restless on thy couch? Why to my waking watching ear so often does the stillness of the night betray thy struggling sighs?

Al. Must not I fight against my country, against my brethren?

Cora. Do they not feek our destruction, and are not all men brethren?

Al. Should they prove victorious?

Cora. I will fly, and meet thee in the mountains.

Al. Fly, with thy infant, Cora? .

Cora. What! think you a mother, when she runs from danger, can feel the weight of her child?

Al. Cora, my beloved, do you wish to set my heart at rest?

Cora. Oh yes! yes! yes!

Al. Hasten then now to the concealment in the mountains; there dwells your father, and there all our matrons and virgins, and our warriors' offspring, are allotted to await the issue of the war. Cora will not alone resist her husband's, her sisters', and her monarch's wish.

Cora. Alonzo, I cannot leave you: Oh! how in every moment's absence would my fancy paint you, wounded, alone, abandon'd! No, no, I cannot leave you.

AL Rolla will be with me.

Cora. Yes, while the battle rages, and where it rages most, brave Rolla will be found. He may revenge, but cannot save thee. To follow danger, he will leave even thee. But I have sworn never to forsake thee but with life. Dear, dear Alonzo! can you wish that I should break my yow?

Al. Then be it so. Oh! excellence in all that's great and lovely, in courage, gentleness, and truth; my pride, my content, my all! Can there on this earth be fools who seek for happiness, and pass by love in the pursuit?

Cora. Alonzo, I cannot thank you: filence is the gratitude of true affection: who feeks to tollow it by found will miss the track, (Shout without.) Does the King approach?

Al. No, 'tis the General placing the guard that will furround the temple during the facrifice.' Tis Rolla comes, the first and best of heroes. (Trumpets sound.)

ROLLA.

Rol. (as entering.) Then place them on the hill fronting the Spanish camp. (Enters.)

Cora. Rolla! my friend, my brother!

Al. Rolla! my friend, my benefactor! how can our lives repay the obligations which we owe you?

Rol. Pass them in peace and bliss.—Let Rolla witness it, he is overpaid.

Cora. Look on this child—He is the life-blood of my heart; but if ever he loves or reveres thee less than his own father, his mother's hate fall on him!

Ral. Oh, no more!—What facrifice have I made to merit gratitude? The object of my love was Cora's happiness.—I fee her happy.—Is not my object gain'd, and am I not rewarded? Now, Cora, listen to a friend's advice. You must away; you must feek the facred caverns, the unprofan'd recess, whither, after this day's facrifice, our matrons, and e'en the Virgins of the Sun, retire.

Cora. Not fecure with Alonzo and with thee,

Rol. We have heard Pizarro's plan is to furprife us.—Thy prefence, Cora, cannot aid, but may impede our efforts.

Cora. Impede!

Rol. Yes, yes. Thou know it how tenderly we love thee; we, thy husband and thy friend. Art thou near us? our thoughts, our valour—vengeance will not be our own.—No advantage will be pursued that leads us from the spot where thou art placed; no succour will be given but for thy protection. The faithful lover dares not be all himself amid the war, until he knows that the beloved of his soul is absent from the peril of the fight.

Al. Thanks to my friend! 'tis this I would have urged.

Cora. This timid excess of love, producing fear instead of valour, flatters, but does not convince me: the wife is incredulous.

Rol. And is the mother unbelieving too?

Cora. No more—Do with me as you please. My friend, my husband! place me where you will.

Al. My adored! we thank you both. (March without.) Hark! the King approaches to the facrifice. You, Rolla, spoke of rumours of surprise.—
A servant of mine, I hear, is missing; whether furprised or treacherous, I know not.

Rol. It matters not. We are every where prepared. Come, Cora, upon the altar 'mid the rocks thou'lt implore a bleffing on our cause. The pious supplication of the trembling wise, and mother's heart, rises to the throne of mercy, the most resistless prayer of human homage.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.

The Temple of the Sun: it represents the magnificence of Peruvian idolary: in the centre is the altar.—A solemn march.—The Warriors and King enter on one side of the Temple.—ROLLA, ALONZO, and CORA, on the other.

Ata. Welcome, Alonzo!—(To Rolla.) Kinfman, thy hand.—(To Cora.) Bless'd be the object of the happy mother's love.

Cora. May the fun bless the father of his people!

Ata. In the welfare of his children lives the happiness of their King. Friends, what is the temper of our soldiers?

Rol. Such as becomes the cause which they support;

support; their cry is, Victory or death! our

King! our Country! and our God!

Ata. Thou, Rolla, in the hour of peril, hast been wont to animate the spirit of their leaders, ere we proceed to consecrate the banners which thy valour knows fo well to guard.

Rol. Yet never was the hour of peril near; when to inspire them words were so little needed. My brave affociates—partners of my toil, my feelings and my fame !- can Rolla's words add vigour to the virtuous energies which inspire your hearts? -- No-you have judged as I have, the foulness of the erafty plea by which thefe bold invaders would delude you-Your generous spirit has compared as thine has, the motives, which, in a war like this, can animate their minds, and ours.—THEY, by a strange frenzy driven, fight for power, for plunder, and extended rule-we, for our country, our altars, and our homes.—They follow an Adventurer whom they fear - and obey a power which they bate—we ferve a Monarch whom we love—a God whom we adore.—Whene'er they move in anger, defolation tracks their progress!-Where'er they pause in amity, affliction mourns their friendship !- They boast, they come but to improve our state, enlarge our thoughts, and free us from the yoke of error !-Yes-THEY will give enlightened freedom to our minds, who are themselves the flaves of pastion, avarice, and pride.-They offer us their protection-Yes, fuch protection as vultures give to lambs-covering and devouring them! -They call on us to barter all of good we have inherited and proved, for the desperate chance of something better which they promise.—Be our plain answer this: The throne we honour is the PEOPLE'S CHOICE—the laws we reverence are our brave Fathers' legacy—the faith we follow teaches us to live in bonds of charity with all mankind, and die with hope of bliss beyond the grave. Tell your invaders this, and tell them too, we seek no change; and, least of all, such change as they would bring us.

[Trumpets found.

Ata. (Embracing Rolla.) Now, holy friends, ever mindful of these sacred truths, begin the sacrifice. (A solemn Procession commences from the recess of the Temple above the Altar—The Priests and Virgins of the Sun arrange themselves on either side—The High-Priest approaches the Altar, and the solemnity begins—The Invocation of the High-Priest is followed by the Chorusses of the Priests and Virgins—Fire from above lights upon the Altar.—The whole assembly rise, and join in the Thanksesiving.) Our offering is accepted.—Now to arms, my friends, prepare for battle.

Enter ORANO.

Ora. The enemy!

Ora. From the hill's brow, e'en now as I o'erlooked their force, fuddenly I perceived the whole in motion: with eager hafte they march towards our deferted camp, as if apprised of this most folemn facrifice.

Rol. They must be met before they reach it.

Ata. And you, my daughters, with your dear children, away to the appointed place of safety.

Cora.

Cora. Oh, Alonzo! (Embracing bim.)

Al. We shall meet again.

Cora. Bless us once more, ere you leave us.

Al. Heaven protect and bless thee, my beloved; and thee, my innocent!

Ata. Haste, haste !-each moment is precious!

Cora. Farewell, Alonzo! Remember thy life is mine.

Rol. Not one farewell to Rolla?

God of war be with you: but, bring me back Alonzo.

Cora. (Giving him her hand.) Farewell! The God of war be with you: but, bring me back Alonzo.

[Exit with the Child.]

Ata. (Draws his fword.) Now, my brethren, my fons, my friends, I know your valour.— Should ill success affail us, be despair the last feeling of your hearts.—If successful, let merey be the first. Alonzo, to you I give to defend the narrow passage of the mountains. On the right of the wood be Rolla's station. For me, strait forwards will I march to meet them, and fight until I see my people saved, or they behold their Monarch fall. Be the word of battle—God! and our native land. (A march.)

[ Exeunt.

SCENE III.

The Wood between the Temple and the Camp.

Enter ROLLA and ALONZO.

Rol. Here, my friend, we separate—soon, I trust, to meet again in triumph.

Al. Or perhaps we part to meet no more.
Rolla, a moment's paule; we are yet before our army's army's strength; one earnest word at parting.

Rol. There is in language now no word but battle.

Al. Yes, one word more—Cora!

Rol. Cora! Speak!

Al. The next hour brings us-

Rol. Death or victory!

Al. It may be victory to one—death to the other.

Rol. Or both may fall.

Al. If so, my wife and child I bequeath to the protection of Heaven and my King. But should I only fall, Rolla, be thou my heir.

Rol. How?

Al. Be Cora thy wife—be thou a father to my child.

Rol. Rouse thee, Alonzo! Banish these timid fancies.

Al. Rolla! I have tried in vain, and cannot fly from the foreboding which oppresses me: thou know'st it will not shake me in the fight: but give me your promise.

Rol. If it be Cora's will-Yes-I promise-

(Gives his hand.)

Al. Tell her it was my last wish! and bear to her and to my fon, my last bleffing.

Rol. I will.—Now then to our posts, and let our swords speak for us. (They draw their swords.)

Al. For the King and Cora!
Rol. For Cora and the King!

[Exeunt different ways. Alarms without.

SCENE IV.

A View of the Peruvian Camp, with a distant View of a Peruvian Village. Trees growing from a rocky Eminence on one Side. Alarms continue.

Enter an Old blind Man and a Boy.

O. Man. Have none returned to the camp?

Boy. One meffenger alone. From the temple

they all march'd to meet the foe.

O. Man. Hark! I hear the din of battle. O! had I still retain'd my fight, I might now have grasp'd a sword, and died a soldier's death! Are we quite alone?

Boy. Yes!—I hope my father will be fafe!

O. Man. He will do his duty. I am more anxious for thee, my child.

Boy. I can stay with you, dear grandfather.

O. Man. But should the enemy come, they will drag thee from me, my boy.

Boy. Impossible, grandfather! for they will see at once that you are old and blind, and cannot do without me.

O. Man. Poor child! you little know the hearts of these inhuman men.—(Discharge of cannon beard.) Hark! the noise is near—I hear the dreadful roaring of the fiery engines of these cruel strangers.—(Shouts at a distance.) At every shout, with involuntary haste I clench my hand, and fancy still it grasps a sword! Alas! I can only serve my country by my prayers. Heaven preserve the Inca and his gallant soldiers!

Boy. O father! there are foldiers running-

O. Man. Spaniards, boy?

Boy. No, Peruvians!

O. Man.

O. Man. How! and flying from the field!—
It cannot be.

Enter two Peruvian Soldiers.

O speak to them, boy!—Whence come you? How goes the battle?

Sol. We may not stop; we are sent for the reserve behind the hill. The day's against us.

Exeunt Soldiers.

O. Man. Quick, then, quick!

Boy. I fee the points of lances glittering in the light.

O. Man. Those are Peruvians. Do they bend this way?

Enter a Peruvian Soldier.

Boy. Soldier, speak to my blind father.

Sol. I'm fent to tell the helpless father to retreat among the rocks: all will be lost, I fear. The King is wounded.

O. Man. Quick, boy! Lead me to the hill, where thou may'st view the plain. (Alarms)

Enter ATALIBA, wounded, with ORANO, Officers, and Soldiers.

Ata. My wound is bound; believe me, the hurt is nothing: I may return to the fight.

Ora. Pardon your fervant; but the allotted priest who attends the sacred banner has pronounced that the Inca's blood once shed, no blessing can await the day until he leave the field.

Ata. Hard restraint! O! my poor brave soldiers!—Hard that I may no longer be a witness of their valour. But haste you; return to your comrades: I will not keep one soldier from his post. Go, and avenge your fallen brethren. [Exeunt Orano, Officers, and Soldiers.] I will not repine; my own sate is the last anxiety of my heart. It is for you, my people, that I feel and fear.

Old Man and Boy advance.

O. Man. Did I not hear the voice of an unfortunate?—Who is it complains thus?

Ata. One almost by hope forfaken.

O. Man. Is the King alive?
Ata. The King still lives.

O. Man. Then thou art not forfaken! Ataliba protects the meanest of his subjects.

Aia. And who shall protect Ataliba?

O. Man. The immortal Powers, that protect the just. The virtues of our Monarch alike secure to him the affection of his people and the benign regard of Heaven.

Ata. How impious, had I murmured! How wondrous, thou supreme Disposer, are thy acts! Even in this moment, which I had thought the bitterest trial of mortal suffering, thou hast insused the sweetest sensation of my life—it is the assurance of my people's love.

Boy. (Turning forward.) O, father!—Stranger, fee those hideous men that rush upon us yonder!

Ata. Ha! Spaniards!—And I—Ataliba—ill-fated fugitive, without a fword even to try the ransom of a monarch life.

Enter DAVILLA, ALMAGRO, and Spanish Soldiers.

Dav. 'Tis he-our hopes are answered-I know him well-it is the King!

Alm. Away! Follow with your royal prize. Avoid those Peruvians, though in flight. This way we may regain our line.

[Exeunt Davilla, Almagro, and Soldiers, with Ataliba prisoner.

O. Man. The King! Wretched old man, that could not see his gracious form!—Boy, would thou hadit led me to the reach of those ruffians' swords!

Boy. Father! all our countrymen are flying here for refuge.

O. Man. No-to the rescue of their King-they never will desert him. (Alarms without.)

Enter Peruvian Officers and Soldiers, flying across the stage; ORANO following.

Ora. Hold, I charge you! Rolla calls you. Officer. We cannot combat with their dreadful engines.

Enter ROLLA.

Rol. Hold, recreants! cowards!—What, fear ye death, and fear not shame? By my soul's fury, I cleave to the earth the first of you that stirs, or plunge your dastard swords into your leader's heart, that he no more may witness your disgrace. Where is the King?

Ora. From this old man and boy I learn that the detachment of the enemy which you obferved to suddenly to quit the field, have succeeded in surprising him; they are yet in fight.

Rol. And bear the Inca off a prisoner?— Hear this, ye base, disloyal rout! Look there! The dust you see hangs on the bloody Spaniards' track, dragging with ruffian taunts your King, your father!—Ataliba in bondage. Now sly, and seek your own vile safety, if you can.

O. Man. Bless the voice of Rolla—and bless the stroke I once lamented, but which now spares these extinguished eyes the shame of seeing the pale trembling wretches who dare not follow Rolla though to fave their King!

Rol. Shrink ye from the thunder of the foe—and fall ye not at this rebuke? Oh! had ye each but one drop of the loyal blood which gushes to waste through the brave heart of this fightless veteran! Eternal shame pursue you, if you desert me now!—But do—alone I go—alone—to die with glory by my monarch's side!

Soldiers. Rolla! we'll follow thee. (Trumpets found; Rolla rushes out, followed by Orano, Officers, and Soldiers.)

O. Man. O godlike Rolla!—And thou sun, fend from thy clouds avenging lightning to his aid!—Haste, my boy; ascend some height, and tell to my impatient terror what thou seest.

Boy. I can climb this rock, and the tree above. (Ascends a rock, and from thence into the tree.) O—now I see them—now—yes—and the Spaniards turning by the steep.

O. Man. Rolla follows them?

Boy. He does—he does—he moves like an arrow!—now he waves his arm to our foldiers—
(Report

(Report of cannon heard.) Now there is fire and smoke.

O. Man. Yes, fire is the weapon of those fiends.

Boy. The wind blows off the smoke: they are all mixed together.

O. Man. Seeff thou the King?

Boy. Yes—Rolla is near him! His fword sheds fire as he strikes!

O. Man. Bless thee, Rolla! Spare not the monsters.

Boy. Father! father! the Spaniards fly!—O —now I see the King embracing Rolla. (Waving his cap for joy. Shouts of victory, flourish of trumpets, &c.)

O. Man. (Falls on his knees.) Fountain of life! how can my exhausted breath bear to thee thanks for this one moment of my life! My boy, come down, and let me kiss thee—My strength is gone! (The Boy having run to the Old Man)

Boy. Let me help you, father—You tremble

O. Man. 'Tis with transport, boy!

[Boy leads the Old Man off.

Shouts, Flourift, &c.

Enter ATALIBA, ROLLA, and Peruvian Officers, and Soldiers.

Ata. In the name of my people, the saviour of whose sovereign you have this day been, accept this emblem of his gratitude. (Giving Rolla bis sun of diamonds.) The tear that falls upon it may for a moment dim its lustre, yet does it not impair the value of the gift.

Rol.

Rol. It was the hand of Heaven, not mine, that faved my King.

Enter ORANO, and Soldiers.

Rol. Now, foldier, from Alonzo?

Ora. Alonzo's genius foon repaired the panic which early broke our ranks; but I fear we have to mourn Alonzo's loss; his eager spirit urged him too far in the pursuit!

Ata. How! Alonzo flain?

1st Sol. I faw him fall.

ad Sol. Trust me I beheld him up again and fighting—he was then surrounded and disarmed.

Ata. O! victory, dearly purchased!

Rol. O Cora! Who shall tell thee this?

Ata. Rolla, our friend is lost—our native country faved! Our private forrows must yield to the public claim for triumph. Now go we to fulfil the first, the most facred duty which belongs to victory—to dry the widowed and the orphaned tear of those whose brave protectors have perished in their country's cause.

ACT III.

SCENE I.

A wild Retreat among stupendous Rocks.—Cora and her Child, with other Wives and Children of the Peruvian Warriors, are scattered about the scene in groups.—They sing alternately, Stanzas expressive of their situation, with a Chorus, in which all join.

ZULUGA, feest thou nothing yet?

Zul. Yes, two Peruvian soldiers, one on the hill; the other entering the thicket in the vale.

2d Per. Woman. One more has pass'd.—He comes—but pale and terrified.

Cora. My heart will start from my bosom.

Enter a Peruvian Soldier, panting for breath.

Wom. Well! joy or death?

Sold. The battle is against us. The King is wounded, and a prisoner.

Wom. Despair and misery!

Cora. (In a faint voice.) And Alonzo?

Sold. I have not feen him.

If Wom. Oh! whither must we fly?

2d Wom. Deeper into the forest.

Cora. I shall not move.

Another Peruvian Soldier, (without.) Victory!

Rejoice! Rejoice! We are victorious!

Wom.

Wom. (Springing up.) Welcome! welcome! thou messenger of joy: but the King!

Sold. He leads the brave warriors, who approach.

(The triumphant march of the army is heard at a distance.—The Women and Children join in a strain expressive of anxiety and exultation.—The Warriors enter singing the Song of Victory, in which all join.—The King and ROLLA follow, and are met with rapturous and affectionate respect. Cora, during this scene, with her Child in her arms, runs through the ranks searching and inquiring for Alonzo.)

Ata. Thanks, thanks, my children! I am well: believe it; the blood once stopp'd, my wound was nothing. (Cora at length approaches Rolla, who appears to have been mournfully avoiding her.) Where is Alonzo?

(Rolla turns away in silence.)
Cora. (Falling at the King's feet.) Give me my husband, give this child his father.

Ata. I grieve that Alonzo is not here.

Cora. Hop'd you to find him?

Ata. Most anxiously.

Cora. Ataliba! is he not dead?

Ata. No! the Gods will have heard our prayers.

Cora. Is he not dead, Ataliba?

Ata. He lives—in my heart.

Cora. Oh King! torture me not thus! speak out, is this child fatherles?

Ata. Dearest Cora! do not thus dash aside the little hope that still remains.

Cora. The little hope! yet still there is hope! Speak to me, Rolla: you are the friend of truth.

Rol. Alonzo has not been found.

Cora. Not found! What mean you? will not you, Rolla, tell me truth? Oh! let me not hear the thunder rolling at a distance; let the bolt fall and crush my brain at once.—Say not that he is not found: say at once that he is dead.

Rol. Then should I say false.

Cora. False! Bleffings on thee for that word! But snatch me from this terrible suspense. Lift up thy little hands, my child; perhaps thy ignorance may plead better than thy mother's agony.

Rol. Alonzo is taken prisoner.

Cora. Prisoner! and by the Spaniards? Pizar-ro's prisoner? Then is he dead.

Ata. Hope better-the richest ransom which our realm can yield, a herald shall this instant bear.

Per. Wom. Oh! for Alonzo's ranfom—our gold, our gems!—all! all!—Here, dear Cora,—here! here!

(The Peruvian Women eagerly tear off all their ornaments, and run and take them from their children, to offer them to Cora.)

Ata. Yes, for Alonzo's ranfom they wou'd give all!—I thank thee, Father, who hast given me such hearts to rule over!

Cora. Now one boon more, beloved monarch.

Let me go with the herald.

Ata. Remember, Cora, thou art not a wife only, but a mother too: hazard not your own honour, and the fafety of your infant. Among these barbarians the fight of thy youth, thy loveliness, and innocence, would but rivet faster your Alonzo's chains, and rack his heart with added sears for thee.—Wait, Cora, the return of the herald.

Cora. Teach me how to live till then.

Ata. Now we go to offer to the Gods, thanks for our victory, and prayers for our Alonzo's fafety. [March and procession. Exeunt omnes.

SCENE II.

The Wood.

Enter CORA and Child.

Cora. Mild innocence, what will become of

Enter Rolla.

Rol. Cora, I attend thy fummons at th' appointed spot.

Cora. Oh my child, my boy !- hast thou still a father?

Rol. Cora, can thy child be fatherless, while Rolla lives?

Cora. Will he not foon want a mother too?—
For canst thou think I will survive Alonzo's loss?

Rol. Yes! for his child's fake.—Yes, as thou didft love Alonzo, Cora, listen to Alonzo's friend.

Cora. You bid me liften to the world.—Who was not Alonzo's friend?

Rol. His parting words-

Cora. His parting words! (Wildly.) Oh, speak!
Rol. Confign'd to me two precious trusts—his bleffing to his son, and a last request to thee.

Cora. His last request! his last!—Oh, name it!

Rol. If I fall, said he—(and sad forebodings shook him while he spoke)—promise to take my Cora for thy wise; be thou a father to my child.

—I pledged my word to him, and we parted.—
Observe me, Cora, I repeat this only, as my saith to do so was given to Alonzo—for myself, I neither cherish claim or hope.

Cora. Ha! does my reason fail me, or what

Oh, Alonzo! It may be thou hast fallen a victim to thy own guileless heart—hadst thou been silent, hadst thou not made a fatal legacy of these wretched charms—

Rol. Cora! what hateful fuspicion has posfeffed thy mind?

Cora. Yes, yes, 'tis clear—his spirit was enfnar'd; he was led to the fatal spot, where mortal valour could not front a host of murderers—
He fel!—in vain did he exclaim for help to Rolla. At a distance you look'd on and smil'd
—You could have saved him—could—but did not.

Rol. Oh, glorious sun! can I have deserved this? Cora, rather bid me strike this sword into my heart.

Cora. No! live! live for love! for that love thou feekest; whose blossoms are to shoot from the bleeding grave of thy betray'd and slaughter'd friend!—But thou hast borne to me the last words of my Alonzo! Now hear mine—Sooner shall this boy draw poison from this tortured breast—sooner would I link me to the pallid corse of the meanest wretch that perish'd with Alonzo, than he call Rolla father—than I call Rolla husband!

Rol. Yet call me what I am-thy friend, thy protector!

Cora. (Distractedly.) Away! I have no protector but my God!—With this child in my arms will I hasten to the field of slaughter—There with these hands will I turn up to the light every mangled body—seeking, howe'er by death disfigur'd, the sweet smile of my Alonzo:—with searful cries I will shriek out his name till my veins snap! If the smallest finallest spark of life remains, he will know the voice of his Cora, open for a moment his unstrouded eyes, and bless me with a last look: But if we find him not—Oh! then, my boy, we will to the Spanish camp—that look of thine will win me passage through a thousand swords—They too are men.—Is there a heart that could drive back the wife that seeks her bleeding husband; or the innocent babe that cries for his imprison'd father? No, no, my child, every where we shall be safe.—A wretched mother bearing a poor orphan in her arms, has Nature's passport through the world. Yes, yes, my son, we'll go and seek thy father.

[Exit with the Child.]

Rol. (After a pause of agitation.) Could I have merited one breath of thy reproaches, Cora, I should be the wretch—I think I was not formed to be.—Her safety must be my present purpose—then to convince her she has wronged me! [Exit.

SCENE III.

Pizarro's Tent.

PIZARRO, traversing the scene in gloomy and furious agitation.

Well, capricious idol, Fortune, be my ruin thy work and boaft. To myself I will still be true.—Yet ere I fall, grant me thy smile to prosper in one act of vengeance, and be that smile Alonzo's death.

Enter ELVIRA.

Who's there? who dares intrude? Why does my guard neglect their duty?

Elv. Your guard did what they could—but they knew their duty better than to enforce authority, when I refused obedience.

Piz. And what is it you defire?

Elv. To see how a hero bears misfortune. Thou, Pizarro, art not now collected—not thy-felf.

Piz. Wouldst thou I should rejoice that the spears of the enemy, led by accurs'd Alonzo, have pierced the bravest hearts of my followers?

Elv. No!—I would have thee cold and dark as the night that follows the departed storm; still and sullen as the awful pause that precedes Nature's convulsion; yet I would have thee feel assured that a new morning shall arise, when the warrior's spirit shall stalk forth—nor fear the suture, nor lament the past.

Piz. Woman! Elvira! - Why had not all my men hearts like thine?

Elv. Then would thy brows have this day worn the crown of Quito.

Piz. Oh! hope fails me while that scourge of my life and fame, Alonzo, leads the enemy.

Elv. Pizarro, I am come to probe the hero farther: not now his courage, but his magnanimity—Alonzo is your prisoner.

Piz. How!

Elv. 'Tis certain; Valverde saw him even now dragged in chains within your camp. I chose to bring you the intelligence myself.

Piz. Bless thee, Elvira, for the news!—Alonzo in my power!—then I am the conqueror—the victory is MINE!

Elv. Pizarro, this is favage and unmanly triumph. Believe me, you raife impatience in my mind to fee the man whose valour, and whose genius, awe Pizarro; whose missortunes are Pizarro's triumph; whose bondage is Piz zarro's fafety.

Piz. Guard! -- (Enter Guard.) -- Drag here the Spanish prisoner, Alonzo! -- Quick bring the traitor here. [Exit Guard.

Elv. What shall be his fate?

Piz. Death! death! in lingering torments! protracted to the last stretch that burning vengeance can devise, and fainting life sustain.

Elv. Shame on thee! Wilt thou have it faid that the Peruvians found Pizarro could not conquer till Alonzo felt that he could murder?

Piz. Be it faid-I care not. His fate is fealed.

Elv. Follow then thy will: but mark me; if basely thou dost shed the blood of this brave youth, Elvira's lost to thee for ever.

Piz. Why this interest for a stranger? What is Alonzo's fate to thee?

Elv. His fate!—nothing!—thy glory, every thing!—Think'it thou I could love thee stript of fame, of honour, and a just renown?—Know me better.

Piz. Thou shouldst have known ME better. Thou shouldst have known, that, once provoked to hate, I am for ever fixed in vengeance.—
(Alonzo is brought in, in chains, guarded. Elvira observes him with attention and admiration.)—Welcome, welcome, Don Alonzo de Molina; 'tis long since we have met: thy mended looks should speak a life of rural indolence. How is it that amid the toils and cares of war thou dost preserve the healthful bloom of careless ease? Tell me thy secret.

Al. Thou wilt not profit by it. Whate'er the toils or cares of war, peace still is here. (Putting bis band to bis heart.)

Piz. Sarcastic boy!

Elv. Thou art answered rightly. Why sport with the unfortunate?

Piz. And thou art wedded too, I hear; aye, and the father of a lovely boy—the heir, no doubt, of all his father's loyalty; of all his mother's faith.

Al. The heir, I trust, of all his father's scorn of fraud, oppression, and hypocrisy—the heir, I hope, of all his mother's virtue, gentleness, and truth—the heir, I am sure, to all Pizarro's hate.

Piz. Really! Now do I feel for this poor orphan; for fatherless to-morrow's sun shall see that child. Alonzo, thy hours are numbered.

Elv. Pizarro-no!

Piz. Hence-or dread my anger.

Elv. I will not hence; nor do I dread thy anger.

Al. Generous loveliness! spare thy unavailing pity. Seek not to thwart the tiger with his prey beneath his fangs.

Piz. Audacious rebel! Thou renegado from thy monarch and thy God!

Al. 'Tis false.

Piz. Art thou not, tell me, a deferter from thy country's legions—and, with vile heathens leagued, hast thou not warred against thy native land?

Al. No! Deserter I am none! I was not born among robbers! pirates! murderers! — When those legions, lured by the abhorred lust of gold, and by thy soul ambition urged, forgot the honour of Castilians, and forsook the duties of humanity, THEY deserted ME. I have not warred against my native land, but against those who have usurped its power. The banners of my country, when first I followed arms beneath them, were Justice, Faith, and Mercy. If these are beaten down and trampled under foot—I have no country, nor exists the power entitled to reproach me with revolt.

Piz. The power to judge and punish thee at least exists.

COUNTRY,

Al. Where are my Judges?

Piz. Thou wouldst appeal to the war council?

Al. If the good Las-Casas have yet a seat

there, yes; if not, I appeal to Heaven!

Piz. And to impose upon the folly of Las-Casas, what would be the excuses of thy treason?

Elv. The folly of Las-Casas!--Such, doubtless, his mild precepts seem to thy hard-hearted wisdom!---O! would I might have lived as I will die, a sharer in the follies of Las-Casas!

Al. To him I should not need to urge the foul barbarities which drove me from your fide; but I would gently lead him by the hand through all the lovely fields of Quito; there, in many a spot where late was barrenness and waste, I would show him how now the opening blossom, blade, or perfumed bud, sweet bashful pledges of delicious barvest, wasting their incense to the ripening fun, give chearful promife to the hope of industry. This, I would fay, is my work! Next I should tell how hurtful cultoms, and fuperstitions strange and fullen, would often scatter and dismay the credulous minds of these deluded innocents; and then would I point out to him where now, in clustered villages, they live like brethren, focial and confiding, while through the burning day Content fits basking on the cheek of Toil, till laughing Pastime leads them to the hour of rest---this too is mine!---And prouder yetyet---at that still pause between exertion and repose, belonging not to passime, labour, or to rest, but unto Him who sanctions and ordains them all, I would show him many an eye, and many a hand, by gentleness from error won, raised in pure devotion to the true and only God! --- this too I could tell him is Alonzo's work!--- Then would Las-Casas class me in his aged arms; from his uplisted eyes a tear of gracious thankfulness would fall upon my head, and that one blessed drop would be to me at once this world's best proof, that I had acted rightly bere, and surest hope of my Creator's mercy and reward bereafter.

Elv. Happy, virtuous Alonzo! And thou, Pizarro, wouldst appal with fear of death a man who thinks and acts as he does!

Piz. Daring, obstinate enthusiast! But know the pious blessing of thy preceptor's tears does not await thee here: he has sled like thee—like thee, no doubt, to join the foes of Spain. The perilous trial of the next reward you hope, is nearer than perhaps you've thought; for, by my country's wrongs, and by mine own, tomorrow's fun shall fee thy death.

Elv. Hold!—Pizarro—hear me!—If not always juftly, at least act always greatly. Name not thy country's wrongs—'tis plain they have no share in thy resentment. Thy sury 'gainst this youth is private hate, and deadly personal revenge; if this be so—and even now thy detected conscience in that look avows it—profane not the name of justice or thy country's cause, but let him arm, and bid him to the field on equal terms.

Piz. Officious advocate for treason—peace! -Bear him hence—he knows his fentence.

Al. Thy revenge is eager, and I'm thankful for it---to me thy haste is mercy. For thee, fweet pleader in misfortune's cause, accept my parting thanks. This camp is not thy proper sphere. Wert thou among you savages, as they are called, thou'dst find companions more congenial to thy heart.

Piz. Yes; she shall bear the tidings of thy death to Cora.

Al. Inhuman man! that pang at least might have been spared me; but thy malice shall not shake my constancy. I go to death---many shall bless, and none will curse my memory. Thou ftill wilt live, and still wilt be-Pizarro.

Exit, guarded.

Elv. Now by the indignant fcorn that burns upon my cheek, my foul is shamed and sickened at the meannels of thy vengeance.

Piz. What has thy romantic folly aimed at?

He is mine enemy, and in my power.

Elv. He is in your power, and therefore is no more an enemy. Pizarro, I demand not of thee virtue--- I ask not from thee nobleness of mind---I require only just dealing to the fame thou hast acquired; be not the affaffin of thine own How often have you fworn that the facrifice which thy wondrous valour's high report had won you from subdued Elvira, was the proudest triumph of your fame? Thou knowest I bear a mind not cast in the common mould--not formed for tame sequestered love--content 'mid household cares to prattle to an idle offspring, and wait the dull delight of an obscure lover's kindness--no! my heart was framed framed to look up with awe and homage to the object it adored; my ears to own no music but the thrilling records of his praise; my lips to secon all babbling but the tales of his achievements; my brain to turn giddy with delight, reading the applauding tributes of his monarch's and his country's gratitude; my every faculty to throb with transport, while I heard the shouts of acclamation which announced the coming of my hero; my whole soul to love him with devotion! with enthusiasm! to see no other object—to own no other tie—but to make HIM my world! Thus to love is at least no common weakness.—Pizarro!—was not such my love for thee?

Piz. It was, Elvira!

Elv. Then do not make me hateful to myfelf, by tearing off the mask at once—baring the hideous imposture that has undone me!—Do not an act which, however thy present power may gloss it to the world, will make thee hateful to all future ages—accursed and scorned by posterity.

Piz. And should posterity applaud my deeds, think'st thou my mouldering bones would rattle then with transport in my tomb?—This is renown for visionary Boys to dream of—I understand it not. The fame I value shall uplift my living estimation—o'erbear with popular support the envy of my foes—advance my purposes, and aid my power.

Elv. Each word thou speakest—each moment that I hear thee—dispels the fatal mist through which I've judged thee. Thou man of mighty name, but little soul, I see thou were not born to feel what genuine same and glory are—yes, prefer the flattery of thy own sleeting day to the bright bright circle of a deathless name—yes, prefer to the upon the grain of sand on which you trample, to musing on the starred canopy above thee. Fame, the sovereign deity of proud ambition, is not to be worshipped so: who seeks alone for living homage, stands a mean canvasser in her temple's porch, wooing promiscuously from the sickle breath of every wretch that passes, the brittle tribute of his praise. He dares not approach the sacred altar—no noble sacrifice of his is placed there, nor ever shall his worship'd image, six'd above, claim for his memory a glorious immortality.

Piz. Elvira, leave me. 1100 200 -- lours 1--

Elv. Pizarro, you no longer love me.

Piz. It is not fo, Elvira. But what might I not suspect—this wondrous interest for a stranger !- Take back thy reproach.

Elv. No, Pizarro; as yet I am not loft to you—one string still remains, and binds me to your fate. Do not, I conjure you—do not for thine own fake, tear it asunder — shed not Alonzo's blood!

Piz. My refolution's fixed.

Elv. Even though that moment lost you Elvira

V Piz. Even fo.

Elv. Pizarro, if not to honour, if not to humanity, yet liften to affection; bear some memory of the sacrifices I have made for thy sake. Have I not for thee quitted my parents, my friends, my same, my native land? When escaping, did I not risk in rushing to thy arms to bury myself in the bosom of the deep? Have I, not shared all thy perils, heavy storms at sea, and frightful scapes on shore? Even on this dreadful dreadful day, amid the rout of battle, who remained firm and constant at Pizarro's side? Who presented her bosom as his shield to the assailing foe?

Piz. 'Tis truly spoken all. In love thou are thy sex's miracle—in war the foldier's pattern and therefore my whole heart and half my acquisitions are thy right.

Elv. Convince me I posses the first-I exchange all title to the latter, for-mercy to Alonzo.

Piz. No more!—Had I intended to prolong his doom, each word thou utterest now would hasten on his fate.

Elv. Alonzo then at morn will die?

Piz. Think'st thou you fun will fet? - As furely at his rifing shall Alonzo die.

Elv. Then be it done-the ftring is crack'd -fundered for ever. - But mark me-thou haft heretofore had cause, 'tis true, to doubt my refolution, howe'er offended-but mark me now -the lips which, cold and jeering, barbing revenge with rancorous mockery, can infult a fallen enemy, shall never more receive the pledge of love: the arm which, unshaken by its bloody purpole, shall assign to needless torture the victim who avows his heart, never more shall press the hand of faith !- Pizarro, scorn not my words—beware you flight them not!—I feel how noble are the motives which now animate my shoughts—who could not feel as I do, I condemn -who, feeling so, yet rould not act as I shall, I despise!

Piz. (After a pause, looking at her with an affected smile of contempt.) I have heard thee, Elyira, and know well the noble motives which inspire inspire thee-fit advocate in virtue's cause !-Believe me, I pity thy tender feelings for the youth Alonzo !- He dies at fun-rife! Exit.

Elv. 'Tis well! 'tis just I should be humbled -I had forgot myself, and in the cause of innocence affumed the tone of virtue. 'Twas fit I should be rebuked—and by Pizarro. Fall. fall, ye few reluctant drops of weakness-the last these eyes shall ever shed. How a woman can love Pizarro, thou hast known too wellhow the can hate, thou hast yet to learn. Yes, thou undaunted! Thou, whom yet no mortal hazard has appalled! Thou, who on Panama's brow didft make alliance with the raving elements, that tore the filence of that horrid night -when thou didft follow, as thy pioneer, the crashing thunder's drift, and stalking o'er the trembling earth, didst plant thy banner by the red volcano's mouth! Thou, who when battling on the fea, and thy brave ship was blown to folinters, wast seen - as thou didst bestride a fragment of the smoking wreck-to wave thy elittering fword above thy head—as thou wouldst defy the world in that extremity! - Come. fearless man-now meet the last and fellest peril of thy life-meet! and furvive-an injured woman's fury, if thou canft.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.

A Dungeon in the Rock, near the Spanish Camp.—
ALONZO in Chains.—A Gentinel walking near the Entrance.

Alonzo. TOR the last time, I have beheld the shadow'd ocean close upon the light .-- . For the last time, thro' my cleft dungeon's roof, I now behold the quivering lustre of the stars.-For the last time, O sun! (and soon the hour) I shall behold thy rifing, and thy level beams melting the pale mists of morn to glittering dewdrops .- Then comes my death, and in the morning of my day, I fall, which--- No, Alonzo, date not the life which thou hast run, by the mean reck'ning of the hours and days, which thou hast breath'd: A life spent worthily should be measured by a nobler line-by deeds-not years-Then woud'st thou murmur not - but bless the Providence, which in so short a span, made THEE the instrument of wide and fpreading bleffings, to the helpless and oppress'd !-The finking in decrepid age -HE prematurely falls, whose memory records no benefit conferred by him on man: They only have lived long, who have lived virtuoufly.

Enter a Soldier - shews the Centinei a Passport, who withdraws.

Alonzo. What bear you there?

Sol. These refreshments I was order'd to leave in your dungeon.

Al. By whom order'd?

Sol. By the lady Elvira; fhe will be here herfelf before the dawn.

Al. Bear back to her my humblest thanks; and take thou the refreshments, friend—I need them not.

Sol. I have ferved under you, Don Alonzo.— Pardon my faying, that my heart pities you.

1 Exit.

Al. In Pizarro's camp, to pity the unfortunate, no doubt requires for giveness.—(Looking out) Surely, even now, thin streaks of glimmering light steal on the darkness of the East.—If so, my life is but one hour more.—I will not watch the coming dawn; but in the darkness of my cell, my last prayer to thee, Power Supreme! shall be for my wife and child!—Grant them to dwell in ianocence and peace; grant health and purity of mind—all else is worthless. (Enters the Cavern.)

Cent. Who's there? answer quickly! who's there?

Rol. A Friar, come to visit your prisoner.

ROLLA enters, difquised as a Monk.

Rol. Inform me, friend—Is not Alonzo, the Spanish prisoner, confined in this dungeon?

Cen. He is.

Rol. I must speak with him.

Cen. You must not.

Rol. He is my friend,

Cent. Not if he were your brother.

Rol. What is to be his fate?

Cen. He dies at fun-rise.

Rol. Ha!-then I'am come in time.

Cen. Just-to witness his death.

Rol. Soldier-I must speak with him.

Cent. Back,—back.—It is impossible!—

Rol. I do entreat you, but for one moment!

Cen. You entreat in vain—my orders are most strict.

Rol. Even now, I saw a messenger go hence.

Cen. He brought a pass, which we are all accustomed to obey.

Rol. Look on this wedge of massive gold—look on these precious gems.—In thy own land they will be wealth for thee and thine, beyond thy hope or wish. Take them—they are thine.—Let me but pass one minute with Alonzo.

Cen. Away!—woud'st thou corrupt me?— Me!—an old Castilian!—I know my duty better.

Rol. Soldier !- hast thou a wife ?

Cen. I have.

Rol. Haft thou children?

Cen. Four-honest, lively boys.

Rol. Where did'st thou leave them?

Cen. In my native village—even in the cot where myself was born.

Rol. Do'ft thou love thy children and thy wife?

Cen. Do I love them! God knows my heart,—

Rol. Soldier! imagine thou wer't doom'd to die a cruel death in this strange land—What would be thy last request?

Cen. That some of my comrades should carry my dying bleffing to my wife and children.

Rol. Oh! but if that comrade was at thy prifon gate—and should there be told—thy sellow soldier dies at sun-rise,—yet thou shalt not for a moment see him—nor shalt thou bear his dying blessing to his poor children or his wretched wise,—what would'st thou think of him, who thus cou'd drive thy comrade from the door?

Cen. How!

Rol. Alonzo has a wife and child—I am come but to receive for ber, and for her babe, the last bleffing of my friend.

. Cen. Go in .- (Retires.)

Rol. Oh! holy Nature! thou do'st never plead in vain.—There is not, of our earth, a creature bearing form, and life, human or savage—native of the forest wild, or giddy air—around whose parent bosom, thou hast not a cord entwined of power to tie them to their offspring's claims, and at thy will to draw them back to thee. On iron pennons borne—the blood-stain'd vulture, cleaves the storm—yet, is the plumage closest to her heart, soft as the Cygnet's down, and o'er her unshell'd brood, the murmuring ring-dove fits not more gently!—Yes—now he is beyond the porch, barring the outer gate! Alonzo!—My friend! Ha!—in gentle sleep!—Alonzo-rise!

Al. How !- Is my hour elaps'd ?- Well, (returning from the recess,) I am ready.

Rol. Alonzo,-know me.

Al. What voice is that?

Rol. 'Tis Rolla's.

Al. Rolla!—my friend!—(Embraces bim.)
Heavens! how could'st thou pass the guard? Did this habit——

Rel. There is not a moment to be lost in words; —this disguise I tore from the dead body of a Friar, as I pass'd our field of battle—it has gain'd me entrance to thy dungeon—now take it thou, and fly.

Al. And Rolla-

Rol. Will remain here in thy place.

Al. And die for me!-No!-Rather eternal tortures rack me.

Rol. I shall not die, Alonzo.—It is thy life Pizarro seeks, not Rolla's—and from my prison soon will thy arm deliver me;—or, should it be otherwise—I am as a blighted Rlantain standing alone amid the sandy desart—Nothing seeks or lives beneath my shelter—Thou art a husband, and a father—The being of a lovely wife and helpless infant hang upon thy life—Go!—Go!—Alonzo!—Go—to save—not thyself—but Cora, and thy child!—

Al. Urge me not thus, my friend-I had pre-par'd to die in peace.

Rol. To die in peace!—devoting her you've fworn to live for,—to madness, misery, and death!
—For, be assured—the state I left her in forbids all hope, but from thy quick return.

Al. Oh! God!

Rol. If thou art yet irresolute, Alonzo—now heed me well.—I think thou hast not known that Rolla ever pledg'd his word, and shrunk from its sulfilment.—And, by the heart of truth I swear, if thou art proudly obstinate to deny thy friend the transport of preserving Cora's life, in thee,—no power that sways the will of man shall stir me hence;—and thou'lt but have the desperate triumph, of seeing Rolla perish by thy side,—with the affur'd conviction, that Cora, and thy child, are lost for ever.

Al. Oh! Rolla !- you distract me!

Rol. A moment's further pause, and all is lost—
The dawn approaches—Fear not for me—I will treat with Pizarro as for surrender and submission;
—I shall gain time, doubt not—while thou, with a chosen band, passing the secret way, may'st at night return—release thy friend, and bear him back in triumph.—Yes—hasten—dear Alonzo!—
Even now I hear the frantic Cora call thee!—
Haste!—Haste!

Al. Rolla, I fear your friendship drives me from honour, and from right.

Rol. Did Rolla ever counsel dishonour to his friend?

Al. Oh! my preserver! - (Embracing bim.)

Rol. I feel thy warm tears dropping on my cheek—Go!—I am rewarded—(Throws the Friar's garment.over Alonzo.)—There!—conceal thy face; and that they may not clank, hold fast thy chains—Now—God be with thee!

Al. At night we meet again.—Then,—fo aid me Heaven! I return to fave—or—perish with thee!

Rol. (alone.) He has pass'd the outer porch—He is safe!—He will soon embrace his wife and child!
—Now, Cora, did'st thou not wrong me? This is the first time throughout my life I ever deceived man—Forgive me, God of truth! if I am wrong—Alonzo slatters himself that we shall meet again—Yes—There! (listing his hands to heaven) affuredly, we shall meet again:—there possess in peace, the joys of everlasting love, and friendship—on earth, impersect, and embitter'd.—I will retire, lest the guard return before Alonzo may have pass'd their lines.

[Retires into the Recess.]

Enter ELVIRA.

Elv. No-not Pizarro's brutal taunts—not the glowing admiration which I feel for this noble youth, shall raise an interest in my harras'd bosom which honour would not fanction. If he reject the vengeance my heart has sworn against the tyrant, whose death alone can save this land—yet, shall the delight be mine to restore him to his Cora's arms, to his dear child, and to the unoffending people, whom his virtues guide, and valour guards.—Alonzo, come forth!

Enter Rolla.

Ha!-who art thou?-Where is Alonzo?

Rol. Alonzo's fled.

Elv. Fled!

Rol. Yes—and he must not be pursued—Pardon this roughness, (seizing her band)—but a moment's precious to Alonzo's slight.

Elv. What if I call the guard?

Rol. Do fo-Alonzo still gains time.

Elv. What if thus I free myself? (Shews a dagger.)

Rol. Strike it to my heart—Still, with the con-

Elv. Release me-I give my faith, I neither will alarm the guard, nor cause pursuit.

Rol. At once, I trust thy word—A feeling boldness in those eyes assures me that thy soul is noble.

Elv. What is thy name? Speak freely—By my order the guard is remov'd beyond the outer porch.

Rol. My name is Rolla.

Elv. The Peruvian Leader?

Rol. I was fo yesterday—To-day, the Spaniard's captive.

Elv. And friendship for Alonzo, moved thee to this act?

Rol. Alonzo is my friend—I am prepared to die for him. Yet is the cause a motive stronger far than friendship.

Elv. One only passion else could urge such generous rafhnefs.

Rol. And that is

Elv. Love?

Rol. True!

Elw. Gallant!—ingenuous Rolla!—Know that my purpose here was thine; and were I to save thy friend——

Rol. How !- a woman blefs'd with gentleness and courage, and yet not Cora!

Elv. Does Rolla think so meanly of all female hearts?

Rol. Not so-you are worse and better than we are!

Elv. Were I to fave thee, Rolla, from the tyrant's vengeance—restore thee to thy native land—and thy native land to peace—would'st thou not rank Elvira with the good?

Rol. To judge the action, I must know the means.

Elv. Take this dagger.
Rol. How to be used?

Elv. I will conduct thee to the tent where fell Pizarro sleeps—The scourge of innocence—the terror of thy race—the fiend, that desolates thy afflicted country.

Rol. Have you not been injur'd by Pizarro?

Elv.

Elv. Deeply as scorn and insult can insuse their deadly venom.

Rol. And you ask that I shall morder him in his fleep!

Elv. Would he not have murder'd Alonzo in his chains? He that sleeps, and he that's bound, are equally defenceless. Hear me, Rolla—so may I prosper in this perilous act as searching my full heart, I have put by all rancorous motive of private vengeance there, and feel that I advance to my dread purpose in the cause of human nature, and at the call of sacred justice.

Rol. The God of Justice fanctifies no evil as a step towards good. Great actions cannot be achieved by wicked means.

Elv. Then, Peruvian! fince thou do'st feel so coldly for thy country's wrongs, this hand, tho' it revolt my soul, shall strike the blow.

Rol. Then is thy destruction certain, and for Peru thou perishest !- Give me the dagger !

Elv. Now follow me;—but first—and dreadful is the hard necessity—you must strike down the guard.

Rol. The foldier who was on duty here?

Elv. Yes, him—else, feeing thee, the alarm will be instant.

Rol. And I must stab that soldier as I pass?—

Elv. Rolla!

Rol. That foldier, mark me, is a man.—All are not men that bear the human form. He refus'd my prayers—refus'd my gold—denying to admit me—till his own feelings brib'd him.—For my nation's fafety, I would not harm that man!

Elv. Then he must with us-I will answer for his fafety.

Rol. Be that plainly understood between us:—
for, whate'er betide our enterprize, I will not risk
a hair of that man's head, to save my heartstrings from consuming fire.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.

The inside of Pizarro's Tent. - Pizarro on a Couch, in disturbed sleep.

Piz. (in bis sleep.) No mercy, traitor.—Now at his heart!—Stand off there, you—Let me see him bleed!—Ha! ha! ha!—Let me hear that groan again.

Enter Rolla and Elvira.

Elv. There !- Now, lose not a moment.

Rol. You must leave me now.—This scene of blood fits not a woman's presence.

Elv. But a moment's pause may-

Rol. Go!—Retire to your own tent—and return not here—I will come to you—Be thou not known in this bufiness, I implore you!

Elv. I will withdraw the guard that waits.

[Exit Elvira.

Rol. Now have I in my power the accurs'd destroyer of my country's peace: yet tranquilly he rests.—God!—can this man sleep?

Piz. (in his sleep.) Away! away!-Hideous fiends!-Tear not my bosom thus!

Rol. No:—I was in error—the balm of sweet repose he never more can know.—Look here, ambition's fools!—Ye, by whose inhuman pride, the bleeding sacrifice of nations is held as nothing—behold the rest of the guilty!—He is at my mercy—and one blow!—No!—my heart and hand refuse the act: Rolla cannot be an assassin!—Yet Elvira

Elvira must be faved! (Approaches the Couch.) Pizarro! awake!-

Piz. (Starts up.) Who?-Guard!-

Rol. Speak not-another word is thy death ---Call not for aid! - this arm will be swifter than thy guard.

Piz. Who art thou? and what is thy will?

Rol. I am thine enemy! Peruvian Rolla!-Thy death is not my will, or I could have flain thee fleeping.

Piz. Speak, what else?

Rol. Now thou art at my mercy—answer me! Did a Peruvian ever yet wrong or injure thee, or any of thy nation? Didst thou, or any of thy nation, ever yet shew mercy to a Peruvian in your power? Now shalt thou feel—and if thou hast a heart, thou'lt feel it keenly!---a Peruvian's vengeance! (Drops the dagger at bis feet) There!

Piz. Is it possible! (Walks aside confounded.)

Rol. Can Pizarro be surprised at this? I thought Forgiveness of Injuries had been the Christian's precept—Thou feeft, at least, it is the Peruvian's practice.

Piz. Rolla-thou hast indeed surpris'd-subdued me. (Walks again afide as in irrefolute thought.)

Re-enter ELVIRA, (not feeing Pizarro.)

Elv. Is it done? Is he dead? (Sees Pizarro) How!-ftill living! Then I am loft! And for you, wretched Peruvians! mercy is no more!— Oh! Rolla! treacherous, or cowardly?—

Piz. How can it be, that—

Rol. Away Elvira speaks she knows not what! Leave me (to Elvira) I conjure you, with Pizarro. Elv. How !-Rolla, do'ft thou think I shall retracttract—or that I meanly will deny, that in thy hand I plac'd a poignard to be plung'd into that tyrant's heart? No:—my sole regret is, that I trusted to thy weakness, and did not strike the blow myself.—Too soon thou'lt learn that mercy to that man is direst cruelty to all thy race!

Piz. Guard! quick! a guard, to seize this frantic woman.

Elv. Yes, a guard! I call them too! And soon I know they'll lead me to my death. But think not, Pizarro, the sury of thy stashing eyes shall awe me for a moment!—Nor think that woman's anger, or the seelings of an injur'd heart, prompted me to this design—No! Had I been only influenced so—thus failing, shame and remorfe would weigh me down. But tho' deseated and destroyed, as now I am, such is the greatness of the cause that urged me, I shall perish, glorying in the attempt, and my last breath of life shall speak the proud avowal of my purpose—to have rescued millions of innocents from the blood-thirsty tyranny of one—by ridding the insulted world of thee.

Enter Guards.

Piz. Seize this discover'd fiend, who sought to kill your Leader.

Elv. Touch me not, at the peril of your fouls;
---I am your prisoner, and will follow you.---But thou, their triumphant Leader, shalt hear me. Yet, first---for thee, Rolla, accept my forgiveness: even had I been the victim of thy nobleness of heart, I should have admir'd thee for it---But 'twas myself

provok'd my doom---Thou would'st have shielded me.---Let not thy contempt follow me to the grave. Didst thou but know the spell-like arts, by which this hypocrite first undermin'd the virtue of a guileless heart! how, even in the pious sanctuary wherein I dwelt, by corruption and by fraud, he practis'd upon those in whom I most consided---'till my distemper'd fancy led me, step by step, into the abys of guilt—

Piz. Why am I not obey'd?---Tear her hence! Elv. 'Tis past—but did'st thou know my story, Rolla, thou would'st pity me.

Rol. From my foul I do pity thee!

Piz. Villains! drag her to the dungeon !--- prepare the torture instantly.

Elv. Soldiers-but a moment more-'Tis to applaud your General-It is to tell the aftonished world, that, for once, Pizarro's sentence is an act of justice: Yes, rack me with the sharpest tortures that ever agoniz'd the human frame; it will be justice. Yes-bid the minions of thy fury—wrench forth the finews of those arms that have carefs'd, and-even have defended thee! Bid them pour burning metal into the bleeding cases of these eyes, that so oft-oh, God!-have hung with love and homage on thy looks—then approach me bound on the abhorred wheelthere glut thy favage eyes with the convultive fpaims of that dishonour'd bosom, which was once thy pillow !- Yet, will I bear it all; for it will be justice, all! And when thou shalt bid them tear me to my death, hoping that thy unshrinking ears may at last be feasted with the music of my cries, I will not utter one shriek or groan—but to the last gasp, my body's patience shall deride thy vengeance, as my soul defies thy power.

Piz. (Endeavouring to conceal bis agitation.)
Hear'st thou the wretch whose hands were even now prepared for murder?

Rol. Yes! And if her accusation's false, thou wilt not shrink from hearing her: if true, thy barbarity cannot make ber suffer the pangs thy conscience will inflict on thee.

Elv. And now, farewell, world !--- Rolla, farewell !--- Farewell, thou condemn'd of Heaven! (to Pizarro;)-for repentance and remorfe, I know, will never touch thy heart .-- We shall meet again .-- Ha! be it thy horror here, to know that we shall meet hereafter! And when thy parting hour approaches -- bark to the knell, whose dreadful beat will strike to thy despairing soul. Then, will vibrate on thy ear the curses of the cloister'd faint from whom you stole me. Then, the last shrieks which burst from my mother's breaking heart, as the died, appealing to her God against the seducer of her child! Then the blood-stiffed groan of my murder'd brother---murdered by thee, fell monster !- feeking atonement for his fifter's ruin'd honour. --- I hear them now! To me. the recollection's madness! --- At fuch an hour, --what will it be to thee?

Piz. A moment's more delay, and at the peril of your lives-

Elv. I have spoken---and the last mortal frailty of my heart is past.---And now, with an undaunted spirit, and unshaken sirmness, I go to meet my destiny. That I could not live nobly, has been PIZARRO'S ACT. That I will die nobly, shall be my own.

[Exit, guarded.

Piz. Rolla, I would not thou, a warrior, valiant and renown'd, should'st credit the vile tales of this frantic woman. The cause of all this fury---O! a wanton passion for the rebel youth Alonzo, now my prisoner.

Rol. Alonzo is not now thy prisoner.

Piz. How!

Rol. I came to rescue him—to deceive his guard—I have succeeded;—I remain thy prifoner.

Piz. Alonzo fled!—Is then the vengeance dearest to my heart never to be gratified?

Rol. Dismiss such passions from thy heart; then thou'lt confult it's peace.

Piz. I can face all enemies that dare confront me --- I cannot war against my nature.

Rol. Then, Pizarro, ask not to be deem'd a hero—To triumph o'er ourselves, is the only conquest, where fortune makes no claim. In battle, chance may finatch the laurel from thee, or chance may place it on thy brow—but in a contest with yourself, be resolute, and the virtuous impulse must be the victor.

Piz. Peruvian! thou shalt not find me to thee ungrateful, or ungenerous—Return to your countrymen—You are at liberty.

Rol. Thou do'ft act in this, as honour, and as duty, bid thee.

Piz. I cannot but admire thee, Rolla; I wou'd we might be friends.

Rol. Farewell.—Pity Elvira!—Become the friend of virtue—and thou wilt be mine. [Exit.

Piz. Ambition! tell me what is the phantom I have follow'd? where is the one delight which it has made my owh? My fame is the mark of envy—my love, the dupe of treachery—my glory, eclips'd eclips'd by the boy I taught—my revenge, defeated and rebuked by the rude honour of a favage foe—before whose native dignity of soul I have sunk consounded and subdued! I would I cou'd retrace my steps—I cannot—Would I could evade my own reslections!---No!---thought and memory are my Hell.

END OF THE FOURTH ACT.

ACT V.

SCENE L

A thick Forest—In the back ground, a Hut almost covered by Boughs of Trees—A dreadful Storm, with Thunder and Lightning.—Cora has covered her Child on a Bed of Leaves and Moss—Her whole appearance is wild and distracted.

NATURE! thou hast not the strength of love. My anxious spirit is untired in its march; my wearied, shivering frame, finks under it. And, for thee, my boy-when faint beneath thy lovely burthen, could I refuse to give thy flumbers that poor bed of rest! O my child! were I affured thy father breathes no more, how quickly would I lay me down by thy dear fide-but down-down for ever. (Thunder and lightning.) I ask thee not, unpitying storm! to abate thy rage, in mercy to poor Cora's mifery; nor while thy thunders spare his slumbers will I disturb my fleeping cherub. Though Heaven knows I wish to hear the voice of life, and feel that life is near me. But I will endure all while what I have of reason holds.

SONG.

Yes, yes, be merciles, thou Tempest dire; Unaw'd, unshelter'd, I thy sury brave: I'll bare my bosom to thy forked fire; Let it but guide me to Alonzo's grave!

O'er his pale corse then while thy lightnings glare, I'll press his clay-cold lips, and perish there.

But thou wilt wake again, my boy,
Again thou'lt rife to life and joy,
Thy father never!—
Thy laughing eyes will meet the light,
Unconscious that eternal night
Veils his for ever.

On you green bed of moss there lies my child, Oh! faser lies from these chill'd arms apart; He sleeps, sweet lamb! nor heeds the tempest wild, Oh! sweeter sleeps, than near this breaking heart.

Alas! my babe, if thou would'ft peaceful reft, Thy cradle must not be thy mother's breast.

Yet, thou wilt wake again, my boy,
Again thou'lt rife to life and joy,
Thy father never!——
Thy laughing eyes will meet the light,
Unconscious that eternal night
Veils his for ever.

(Thunder and lightning.)

Cora. Still, still, implacable! unfeeling elements! yet still dost thou sleep, my smiling innocent! O, death! when wilt thou grant to this babe's mother such repose? Sure I may shield thee better from the storm; my veil may—

While she is wrapping her mantle and her veil over him, Alonzo's voice is heard at a great distance.

Al. Cora!

Cora. Hah!!! (rifes.)

Al. (again) Cora!

not!—Is it not Alonzo's voice?

Al. (nearer) Cora!

Cora. It is-it is Alonzo!

Al. (nearer still) Cora! my beloved! —— Cora. Alonzo!—Here!—here!—Alonzo!

[Runs out.

Enter two Spainish Soldiers.

of Sol. I tell you we are near our out-posts, and the word we heard just now was the counterfign.

ad Sol. Well, in our escape from the enemy, to have discover'd their secret passage thro' the rocks, will prove a lucky chance to us—Pizarro will reward us.

on our left. (Perceives the child.) What have we here?—A child!—as I'm a foldier.

2d Sol. 'Tis a sweet little babe. Now would it be a great charity to take this infant from its pagan mother's power.

one at home shall play with it.---Come along. [Takes the child. Exeunt.

Re-enter CORA with ALONZO.

Cora. (speaking without) This way, dear Alonzo. Now am I right—there—there—under that tree. Was it possible the instinct of a mother's heart could mistake the spot! Now will you look at him as he sleeps, or shall I bring him waking with his full blue laughing eyes to welcome you at once—Yes—yes.—Stand thou there—I'll snatch him from his rosy slumber, blushing like the perfum'd morn.

She runs up to the spot, and, finding only the mantle and veil, which she tears from the ground, and the child gone, (shrieks) and stands in speechless agony.

Al. (running to her) Cora!--my heart's be-

Cora. He is gone!
Al. Eternal God!

Cora. He is gone !-my child ! my child !

Al. Where did you leave him?

Cora. (Dashing herself on the spot.) Here!

Al. Be calm, beloved Cora—he has wak'd, and erept to a little distance—we shall find him—Are you affured this was the spot you left him in?

Cora. Did not these hands make that bed, and shelter for him?—and is not this the veil that covered him?

Al. Here is a hut yet unobserved.

Cora. Ha! yes, yes! there lives the favage that has rob'd me of my child—(Beats at the door, exelaiming) Give me back my child—restore to me my boy!

Enter Las Casas from the Hut.

Las C. Who calls me from my wretched foli-

Cora. Give me back my child! (Goes into the but, and calls) Fernando!

Al. Almighty powers! do my eyes deceive me!

Las Casas!!!

Las C. Alonzo,—my belov'd young friend!

Al. My rever'd instructor. (Embracing)

Cora. (Return'd.) Will you embrace this man before he restores my boy?

Al. Alas, my friend-in what a moment of mifery do we meet!

Cora. Yet his look is goodness and humanity.—
Good old man, have compassion on a wretched mother—and I will be your servant while I live.—
But do not, for pity's sake—do not say, you have him not—do not say, you have not seen him.

(Runs into the Wood.)

Las C. What can this mean?

Al. She is my wife. - Just rescued from the Spaniards' prison, I learn'd she had sled to this wild forest—Hearing my voice, she lest the child, and slew to meet me—he was lest sleeping under yonder tree. Les. C. How! did you leave him? - (Cora re-

Cora. O, you are right!—right!—unnatural mother, that I was—I left my child—I forfook my innocent—but I will fly to the earth's brink, but I will find him. (Runs out.)

Al. Forgive me, Las Casas, I must follow her:

for at night, I attempt brave Rolla's rescue.

Las. C. I will not leave thee, Alonzo—you must try to lead her to the right—that way lies your camp—Wait not my infirm steps,—I follow thee, my friend.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.

The Out-Post of the Spanish Camp.—The back ground wild and rocky, with a Torrent falling down the Precipice, over which a Bridge is formed by a fell'd Tree. [Trumpets sound without.

Almagro. (Without.) Bear him along—his story must be false. (Entering.)

ROLLA (in Chains) brought in by Soldiers.

Rol. False!—Rolla, utter falsehood!—I would I had thee in a desert with thy troop around thee; --- and I, but with my sword in this unshackled hand!--(Trumpets without.)

Alm. Is it to be credited that Rolla, the renown'd Peruvian hero---shou'd be detected like a fpy, skulking thro' our camp?

Rol. Skulking!

Alm. But answer to the General --- he is here.

Enter PIZARRO.

Piz. What do I fee! Rolla!

Rol. O! to thy furprise, no doubt.

Piz. And bound too!

Rol. So fast, thou need'st not fear approaching me.

Alm. The guards furpris'd him, passing our out-post.

Piz. Release him instantly .-- Believe me, I regret this infult.

Rol. You feel then as you ought.

Piz. Nor can I brook to see a warrior of Rolla's fame difarm'd---Accept this, tho' it has been thy enemy's. (Gives a fword.) The Spaniards know the courtely that's due to valour.

Rol. And the Peruvian, how to forget offence. Piz. May not Rolla and Pizarro cease to be foes?

Rol. When the fea divides us; yes! -- May I now depart?

Piz. Freely.

Rol. And shall I not again be intercepted?

Piz. No!---let the word be given that Rolla paffes freely.

Enter DAVILLA and Soldiers, with the Child.

Dav. Here are two foldiers, captived yesterday. who have escap'd from the Peruvian hold, --- and by the fecret way we have so long endeavoured to discover.

Piz. Silence, --- imprudent !--- Seeft thou not---?

(pointing to Rolla.)

Dav. In their way, they found a Peruvian child, who feems-

Piz.

Piz. What is the imp to me?---Bid them tols it into the sea.

Rol. Gracious heaven! it is Alonzo's child!--- give it to me.

Piz. Ha! Alonzo's child!—Welcome, thou pretty hostage.—Now Alonzo is again my pri-

Rol. Thou wilt not keep the infant from it's mother?

Piz. Will I not!—What, when I shall meet Alonzo in the heat of the victorious fight—think'st thou I shall not have a check upon the valour of his heart, when he is reminded that a word of mine is this child's death?

Rol. I do not understand you.

Piz. My vengeance has a long arrear of hate to fettle with Alonzo!—and this pledge may help to fettle the account.

Rol. Man! Man!—Art thou a man?—Could'st thou hurt that innocent?—By Heaven! it's smiling in thy face.

Piz. Tell me, does it refemble Cora?

Rol. Pizarro! thou hast set my heart on fire--If thou do'ft harm that child---think not his blood will fink into the barren sand---No!---faithful to the eager hope that now trembles in this indignant heart---'twill rise to the common God of nature and humanity, and cry aloud for vengeance on it's accurs'd destroyer's head.

Piz. Be that peril mine.

Rol. (Throwing bimfelf at bis feet) Behold me at thy feet.—Me, Rolla!—Me, the preserver of thy life!—Me, that have never yet bent or bow'd before created man!—In humble agony I sue to you—prostrate I implore you—but spare that child, and I will be your slave.

Piz.

Piz. Rolla! still art thou free to go--this boy remains with me.

Rol. Then was this fword Heaven's gift, not thine! (Seizes the Child)--- Who moves one step to follow me, dies upon the spot.

[Exit, with the Child:

Piz. Pursue him instantly---but spare his life.

[Exeunt Almagro and foldiers.] With what fury he defends himself!---Ha!---he fells them to the ground---and now----

Enter ALMAGRO.

Alm. Three of your brave foldiers are already victims to your command to spare this madman's life; and if he once gains the thicket-

Piz. Spare him no longer. [Exit Almagro.] Their guns must reach him---he'll yet escape---holloa to those horse---the Peruvian sees them --- and now he turns among the rocks---then is his retreat cut off.

(Rolla crosses the wooden bridge over the cataract, pursued by the soldiers—they fire at him—a shot strikes him—Pizarro exclaims—Piz. Now! quick! quick! seize the child!--(Rolla tears from the rock the tree which supports the bridge, and retreats by the back ground, bearing off the child.)

Re-enter Almagno.

Alm. By Hell! he has escaped!---and with

Dav. No---he bears his death with him--Believe me, I saw him struck upon the side.

Piz. But the child is fav'd---Alonzo's child! Oh! the furies of disappointed vengeance!

Alm.

Alm. Away with the revenge of words—let us to deeds—Forget not we have acquired the knowledge of the fecret pass, which thro' the rocky cavern's gloom brings you at once to the strong hold, where are lodg'd their women, and their treasures.

Piz. Right, Almagro! Swift as thy thought draw forth a daring and a chosen band--I will not wait for numbers.--Stay, Almagro! Valverde is informed Elvira dies to-day?

Alm. He is --- and one request alone she-

Piz. I'll hear of none.

Alm. The boon is small,—'tis but for the noviciate habit which you first beheld her in—-she wishes not to suffer in the gaudy trappings, which remind her of her shame.

Piz. Well, do as thou wilt---but tell Valverde, that at our return, as his life shall answer it, to let me hear that she is dead. [Exeunt, severally.

SCENE III.

Ataliba's Tent.

Enter ATALIBA, follow'd by CORA and ALONZO.

Cora. Oh! Avoid me not, Ataliba! To whom, but to her King, is the wretched mother to address her griefs?——The Gods refuse to hear my prayers! Did not my Alonzo fight for you?——and will not my sweet boy, if thou'lt but restore him to me, one day fight thy battles too?

Alon. Oh! my suffering love---my poor heartbroken Cora!- -you but wound our Sovereign's seeling soul, and not relieve thy own.

Cora. Is he our Sovereign, and has he not the power to give me back my child?

Ata.

Ata. When I reward defert, or can relieve my people, I feel what is the real glory of a King---when I hear them suffer, and cannot aid them, I mourn the impotence of all mortal power.

(Voices behind) Rolla! Rolla! Rolla!

Enter ROLLA, bleeding, with the child, follow'd by Peruwian foldiers.

Rol. Thy child! (Gives the child into Cora's arms, and falls.)

Cora. Oh God !--- there's blood upon him!

Rol. 'Tis my blood, Cora!

Alon. Rolla, thou dieft!

Rol. For thee, and Cora .-- (Dies.)

Enter ORANO.

Orano. Treachery has revealed our afylum in the rocks. Even now the foe affails the peaceful band retired for protection there.

Alon. Lose not a moment !---Swords be quick!

—Your wives and children cry to you—Bear our lov'd hero's body in the van—'Twill raise the fury of our men to madness.---Now, fell Pizarro! the death of one of us is near!---Away! Be the word of affault, Revenge and Rolla!—[Exeunt. (Charge.)

SCENE IV.

A romantic part of the Recess among the Rocks--(Alarms) Women are seen flying, pursued by the Spanish Soldiers.---The Peruvian Soldiers drive the Spaniards back from the Field.---The Fight is continued on the Heights.

Enter Pizarro, Almagro, Valverde, and Spanish Soldiers.

Piz. Well !-- if furrounded, we must perish in the centre of them---Where do Rolla and Alonzo hide their heads?

Enter ALONZO, ORANO, and Peruvians.

Alon. Alonzo answers thee, and Alonzo's sword shall speak for Rolla.

Piz. Thou know'ft the advantage of thy numbers.---Thou dar'ft not fingly face Pizarro.

Alon. Peruvians, stir not a man!—Be this contest only our's.

Piz. Spaniards !- observe ye the same.

(Charge.)

They fight. Alonzo's shield is broken, and he is beat down.

Piz. Now, traitor, to thy heart !

At this moment Elvira enters, habited as when Pizarro first beheld ber .-- Pizarro, appalled, staggers back .-- Alonzo renews the Fight, and slays him. (Loud shouts from the Peruvians.)

ATALIBA enters, and embraces ALONZO.

Ata. My brave Alonzo!

Alm. Alonzo, we submit.---Spare us! we will embark, and leave the coast.

Val. Elvira will confess I sav'd her life; she has sav'd thine,

Alon. Fear not. You are safe. (Spaniards lay down their arms.)

Elv. Valverde speaks the truth;—nor could he think to meet me here.—An awful impulse which my soul could not resist, impell'd me hither.

Alon. Noble Elvira! my preferver! How can I speak what I, Ataliba, and his rescued country, owe to thee? If amid this grateful nation thou would'st remain—

Elv. Alonzo, no !- the destination of my future life is fix'd. Humbled in penitence, I will endeavour to atone the guilty errors, which, however mask'd by shallow cheerfulness, have long confum'd my fecret heart -When, by my fufferings purified, and penitence fincere, my foul shall dare address the Throne of Mercy in behalf of others, -for thee, Alonzo-for thy Cora, and thy child, -for thee, thou virtuous Monarch, and the innocent race you reign over, shall Elvira's prayers address the God of Nature. - Valverde, you have preferved my life. Cherish humanity—avoid the foul examples thou haft view'd .--- Spaniards returning to your native home, affure your rulers, they mistake the road to glory, or to power .-- Tell them, that the pursuits of avarice, conquest, and ambition, never yet made a people happy, or a nation great .-- ( Casts a look of agony on the dead body of Pizarro as the passes, and exit)

4. AP 54 (Flourish of Trumpets.)

Valverde, Almagro, and Spanish Soldiers, exeunt, bearing off Pizarro's Body.---On a figual from Alonzo, flourish of Music.

Alon. Ataliba! think not I wish to check the voice of triumph -- when I entreat we first may pay the tribute due to our lov'd Rolla's memory.

A solemn March---Procession of Peruvian Soldiers, bearing Rolla's Body on a Bier, surrounded by Military Trophies. The Priests and Priestesses attending chaunt a Dirge over the Bier.---Alonzo and Cora kneel on either side of it, and kiss Rolla's hands in silent agony--- In the looks of the King, and of all present, the Triumph of the Day is lost, in mourning for the fallen Hero.

(The Curtain flowly descends.)

RE yet Suspense has still'd its throbbing fear, Or Melancholy wip'd the grateful tear, While e'en the miseries of a sinking State, A Monarch's danger, and a Nation's fate, Command not now your eyes with grief to flow, Lost in a trembling Mother's nearer woe; What moral lay shall Poetry rehearse, Or how shall Elocution pour the verse So fweetly, that its music shall repay The lov'd illusion, which it drives away? Mine is the talk, to rigid custom due, To me ungrateful, as 'tis harsh to you, To mar the work the tragic scene has wrought, To rouse the mind that broods in pensive thought, To scare Reflection, which, in absent dreams, Still lingers musing on the recent themes; Attention, ere with contemplation tir'd, To turn from all that pleas'd, from all that fir'd; To weaken lessons strongly now imprest, And chill the interest glowing in the breast-Mine is the task; and be it mine to spare The fouls that pant, the griefs they fee, to share; Let me with no unhallow'd jest deride The figh, that fweet Compassion owns with pride-The figh of Comfort, to Affliction dear, That Kindness heaves, and Virtue loves to hear.
